Description of Module № 9

Module name	Historical and legal
Number of credits (ECTS) in the module	12 credits
The content of the module and a brief description of the disciplines	The history of the state and law of the Republic of Kazakhstan are state-legal phenomena of life, in particular: the state as an institution of the political system of society, law as a regulator of social relations in various historical and legal times. The subject of study is the theoretical and methodological foundations of the state-legal regulation of public relations in state formations from ancient times to the present on the territory of Kazakhstan; The history of the state and law of foreign countries - studies the specific processes of development of state-legal institutions and phenomena that develop in chronological sequence in a certain historical space. The history of the state and law of foreign countries is a science that studies the general and specific patterns of the emergence, development and functioning of the state and law of foreign countries, considered in chronological order and in a specific historical setting. / Kazakh customary law is historically the primary type of legal system. It is a complex and multifaceted phenomenon, distinct from a legal system consisting of state-

	sanctioned laws. This difference lies in the historical context, in the socio-political sense, in the inner essence and content, in the external form and possibilities for regulating behavior and influencing it; Professional ethics - as a rule, they concern only those types of professional activities in which there is a different kind of dependence of people on the actions of a professional, that is, the consequences or processes of these actions have a special impact on the life and fate of other people or humanity. In this regard, traditional types of professional ethics are distinguished, such as pedagogical, medical, legal, ethics of a scientist, and relatively new ones, the emergence or actualization of which are associated with an increase in the role of the "human factor" in this type of activity / Roman law - the subject of study of Roman law are the norms of Roman law that arose and existed on the territory of Ancient Rome and the Eastern Roman Empire in the period from the VIII century. BC. according to the VI century. AD Roman law, its doctrines and the way of thinking dictated by it, are today the real lingua franca in the world of jurisprudence.

Module name	Theoretical-legal
Number of credits (ECTS) in the module	10 credits
The content of the module and a brief description of the disciplines	Intellectual property right is a branch of civil law of the Republic of Kazakhstan, which regulates property and personal non-property relations arising in the field of creativity and relations regarding the means of individualization. This is explained by the fact that, firstly, intellectual property law occupies an intermediate position between the industry and the institution of law, secondly, the subject matter is property and personal non-property relations in the field of creativity and relations regarding the means of individualization, and thirdly, these relations are regulated by the method of legal equality of the parties./History of political and legal doctrines - as an academic discipline Today, the importance of the history of political and legal doctrines as a school of alternative thinking has increased, making it possible to compare various theories, directions of political and legal thought, taking into account the centuries-old discussion about these problems; Contract law - we need it in any field of activity - this branch of jurisprudence accompanies us when concluding transactions, employment, interacting with banks, renting housing. As for business, it is simply impossible to imagine it without the use of contract law. Any business based on professionalism, profitability and literacy implies a serious attitude to the signing of various kinds of contracts. / Banking law is an intersectoral set of legal norms that regulate social relations arising in connection with the activities of the banking system. Banking law includes both the norms of civil law and business law (governing the creation and operation of banks as commercial organizations, relations between credit institutions and their clients), and financial law (establishing the basic principles of the credit system, determining the status of the central bank.
